

CHAPTER ONE

START OF THE MESSAGES

COPYRIGHT 2008 TOM T. MOORE

After I started my active meditations in July of 2005, it wasn't too long before I happened to ask about earth changes in my region of the United States—specifically Dallas, Texas. I was told, “With major earthquakes nearby, there will be an influx of refugees from the east and from the west coast and the flooded Mississippi Valley that will strain the ability of your area to take care of them, plus the violent weather caused by these events will affect your area.”

Of course, that put my wheels in motion pondering that message. A few days later, I was told, “Hurricanes will be more destructive. It will presage earthquakes and tsunamis in your own backyard so to speak, with the west coast and east coast heavily affected. There will be warnings for those who wish or need to move away from the coastlines. Mother Earth will cleanse herself and start to bring herself back to a more pristine level.”

November 6, 2005 was the first time I was given the approximate time that the West Coast earthquake will occur—the same time period in 2008. I'll have much more information on the timing in the chapters to follow.

All during this time and for many months to come, I had only a vague idea of how large these events will be. I thought the earthquake would just be centered near San Diego, not the whole western coast of North America.

Slowly, as I asked more and more questions, the full extent of these cataclysmic events were revealed. As an example, I asked what specifically would happen to San Diego California—an earthquake, or other earth event? “They will experience the calamity to them as to most of the rest of the California coast. The fault line will cause a tsunami that will engulf much of the coast. Water will come in, along with breaking up of the coast line.”

Then I asked, “What other parts of California will be affected? “All up the coast past San Francisco and farther. We are talking about a major seismic event that has not been seen in modern times.”

I would ask many more questions in the coming weeks and months, primarily about the Pacific Coast earthquake. But I did begin to ask about what I assumed would just be the New Madrid earthquake, as I was familiar with that fault line, having lived in Arkansas in my teen years. On December 4, 2005 I asked, “When will the New Madrid fault line in Missouri, Tennessee, and Arkansas along the Mississippi River experience a severe earthquake, if ever? The response, “Yes, there will be several violent earthquakes that will be felt for hundreds of miles along the Mississippi. This will come in that period of 2008-2009 that we have spoken about before. The cities along the Mississippi will suffer huge losses of life and property.”

Eventually, I decided to contact the soul of the earth, as I had read that this great soul, who many call Mother Earth or Gaia, would communicate with any human that wished to speak with her. So I asked to speak to her and she replied. I inquired if the earth would have a major release of tension at the New Madrid fault line and whether it would be at the same time as the earthquake in Southern California, before, or after. Gaia said, “It will be a little before the major earthquake for California. But not too much before. That will help prime the pump to use one of your sayings—basically it will help exert more pressure to force the release of California from Mexico. As you have guessed, everything is tied together deep within me.”

Next I asked if the earthquake would widen the Mississippi River, or what would be the end result? “The river will widen as the Great Lakes will feed the river from the north. It will seem as if your continent has split in two, although that is not exactly the case.”

So will this earthquake take place in October of 2008 or closer to November 2008? “Actually it will take place around the end of October. That’s about as close as I wish to disclose at this time.”

Over the ensuing months, I would ask question after question about the New Madrid earthquake and the Pacific Coast earthquake, as I understood them to be. I had no concept that this would be a worldwide catastrophe affecting hundreds of millions of people. With my film distribution background, I have seen my share of earthquake movies, flood movies, giant meteorite movies and so on. But I had no concept that what appeared to be just a North American series of earthquakes would cause such destruction and loss of life around the world.

One day I asked what locations would suffer a tsunami in 2008. “Certainly—Hawaii is an obvious one, plus all the coasts of Asia, including Japan and other islands—Indonesia, the peninsula of Korea, and even Tahiti will see significant wave action. When millions of cubic feet of dirt and coastline drop into the ocean, there has to be a significant wave created that will go out from where the earth fell into the ocean.”

Now I was beginning to grasp a little of the enormity of these events. Yet there was more to come, as I was to discover that a small tsunami would be created by the shift of the eastern plate of the United States, when the Mississippi Valley earthquake occurs. It will produce tsunamis that will strike the European coasts with a ten to twelve foot waves. This will certainly not be as severe as the one produced by the collapse of the west coast, but there will be some destruction.

As I continued to ask questions I began to realize that these two earthquakes will be the catalysts for world wide changes in weather and much more. Global warming will accelerate. As an example, I asked approximately how many people would be displaced. “Certainly several hundred million people over a three to five year period. That figure will be based on how long they try to stay to prevent the coast erosion before they give up and move.”

I did not really understand why I was being given this information and not other people. I received this answer, “You are not the only one, but will be an important funnel of information when the time comes closer to the events. You will write about the events to come and will include it in your talks at a more convenient time when people will be attentive to your statements and will believe what you say, where now that would not be true. You are given this information because you will disseminate this information at the right time, which you will be informed of. You are not able to see the larger big picture, but your talents will be utilized, as you have agreed on a soul level to do. So keep asking questions about the events as you think of them. They will all come together someday.”

Later I would tell my friends that on a soul level I must have been the one to draw the short straw. Several days later I said that if I come out with this information before 2008 events happen, no one will believe me. “That’s what you think now. There will be a great change in people’s perception of you after this year (2006). You will see.”

I really did not understand what that answer meant, so I just “kept on the path” of asking more and more questions. Several months later I asked why was I given the lead position on informing people about the earthquakes when it would seem better to have 500 people out there giving the same information? “There will be a large number of people Tom, but because of your business background and the fact that you are being given information on events that will come to happen in the near future, your visibility will be much higher and that will allow the information to be disseminated more quickly, than if we had 500 mediums trying to impart the same information. As you are well aware, most of the public does not believe in mediums or has such a misunderstanding of them that there is fear or rejection of what information they are trying to give. It may seem a little complex to you, but I assure you we looked at the picture from all sides if you will, and came to the conclusion that one person had to become extremely recognizable to the public, as someone that had helped them have a little better life by saving on their gas bills and by helping take down several of these oil companies that have been gouging people for several years. They will have good feelings for you and will listen to what you have to say, especially when other predictions you publicize come true.”

Gaia--do earthquakes allow you to release “anger energy?” “Yes, they certainly do. There is so much emotional anger in the world that even though humans don’t realize it, this anger builds up—this negativity. It must go somewhere, so it goes within the earth and around the atmosphere. When the earthquakes occur, great energy is released. Otherwise I would literally explode one day. My only other choice would be to do away with the human population, and that really would be my last option, as your experiment is going so well now. Keep in mind that there will be a huge swelling of good energy from the compassion that people around the world will show your country in its time of crises and need. This is good energy.

“I do need it for balance as you have read, and to cut down the population growth that is becoming quite annoyingly large. As much as I like and love humans, 6 billion strains my resources to the breaking point. Plus all the pollution that you do, even though you are trying to correct it yourselves is still very injurious for the earth’s health. I need to revive the deserts that have been in sort of incubation for thousands of years and are now ready to support humans again. Plus by making the earth more temperate, more people will be able to live on lands that were too harsh for most people quite a bit of the year. Canada as you can guess will have its population swell as more people move there for the more temperate climate. Eventually people will inhabit Antarctica again in large numbers. I am spreading the population out while putting under water those coastal lands that have carried the greatest burden these past few hundred years. So as you see, all of these earth changes as you call them will result in a much more livable world.”

Several months later I would ask why the bees were disappearing by the billions. I was told, “Yes, the bee population is disappearing and the numbers are greatly reducing. They will find other acceptable reasons for the bees disappearing, but I am telling you that the major reason is that they are departing in advance of 2008. They have already been told by their divas to expect this event and there will be need for fewer of their numbers after next year.”

A number of people reading this book will be familiar with a map of the world in the future by futurist Gordon Michael Scallion. He had predicted that North America (and the world) would look quite different before the end of the 90’s. It didn’t happen. When I was being given all this information I asked why he had been given a lot of the geographical look so early. “Mr. Scallion was given this information early so that there would be a wide dissemination of the geographic appearance of North America that would be known for years ahead of time. He has been frustrated that what he drew did not come to pass. These maps as you call them are available in the Akashic records but he was allowed to view them.”

I would later be told that the changes he predicted would not be as severe, certainly at least not for 2008. As you’ll read later, I was told that the Mississippi River would begin at Lake Superior, near Duluth, Minnesota, and not from the lower eastern Great Lakes. It will be as wide as he shows towards the bottom, perhaps wider—up to 250 miles in width. He also shows almost all of California and Nevada under water, and that will not be the case. California, as you’ll read, will lose fully one-third of the state, Baja California and the northern coast of Mexico and Lower California will collapse into the sea. How much of the rest of this map will change with the melting of Antarctica and Greenland within the next 15 years, resulting in an 18 to 20 foot rise in the ocean level, I don't know. I'm only concerned right now with 2008 and the following several years.

It's been really hard living with this knowledge the past two years. People say they want to know the future, but if it's not rosy, I can guarantee you don't. I've been told that I was given this information because I'm a strong "old soul" and can handle it. But having that knowledge does not make it an easier cross to bear.

In the following chapter, I will lay down the time line of when these events will occur.
